A German writer observes, in a late volume on the social condition of Great Britain There is such a scarcity of thieves in England, that they are obliged to offer a reward for their discovery" England has to pay daily for the discovery of thieves the sum of £2,000

Speaking of halibut, a countryman lately visiting Delmonico's, came to that word among the list of fish on his bill of fare, and never having seen or tasted any, thought he would try some 'Have you got any halibut?' "Yes, sir,' replied the waiter 'Well, bring me a couple"

There was once a clergyman in New Hampshire noted for his long sermons and his indolent habits "How is it,' said a man to his neighbor "that Parson , the laziest man living, writes those interminable sermons?' "Why," said the other, "he probably gets to writing, and he is too lazy to stop'

CURING MEAT —The Germantown (Pa) Telegraph publishes, once a year, the following as "Our Recipe for Curing Meat:"

"To one gallon of water put one and a half pounds of salt, half pound of sugar, half ounce of saltpeter, half ounce of potash In this ratio the pickle to be increased to any quantity desired Let these be boiled together, until all the dirt from the sugar rises to the top and is skimmed off Then throw into a tub to cool, and then pour it over your beef or pork, to remain the usual time, say four or five weeks The meat must be well covered with pickle, and should not be put down for at least two days after killing, during which time it should be slightly sprinkled with powdered saltpeter, which removes all the surface blood, etc leaving the meat fresh and clean Some omit boiling the pickle, and find it to answer well though the operation of boiling purifies the pickle by throwing off the dirt always to be found in salt and sugar If this recipe is properly tried, it will never be abandoned There is none that surpasses it, if so good

PROPOSED SALE OF TAMMANY HALL Efforts are being made by the Tammany Society to dispose of the Hall at the corner of Frankfort and Nassau streets The building was erected during the years 1811 and 1812 the corner stone being laid on the 13th of May, 1811 Its cost was $28,000, which sum was raised by subscriptions, the subscribers receiving certificates for the amounts paid in by them As hundreds of these certificates were issued, many of which are now lost or destroyed great difficulty will be experienced by the Society in making a clear title to the property each holder of a certificate being considered as part owner of the land and building Whether these difficulties will ever be overcome is somewhat doubtful, but at the meeting of the Society on Monday next, it is said that a scheme will be proposed by which the matter may be settled The property is said to be worth $150 000 and one of our largest Express Companies it is understood is anxious to become the purchaser If the Hall is sold it is probable that the Society will erect another up town

Uncle John Morris was a chronic toper One day while returning from the tavern he found locomotion impossible and brought up in the corner of a worm fence where he remained standing He had been there only a few minutes when the minister came along "Uncle John' said he, where do you suppose you will go to when you die?" If I can't go any better than I do now, I shan't go anywhere' replied uncle John

The Charivari gives a specimen of bootblack's wit A poor ragged fellow with his toes protruding from his boots put up his leg on the box of a shoeblack near the Bourse to have the boot polished The shoeblack rubbed up as fine a polish as if his customer had been a lord but when he had finished the shining of the boot he looked up at his face with a melancholy air and said 'Shall I shine your toe nails as well?"

The Story of a Union Scout—Adventures of Fate Arnold—A Chapter of the War

From the days of Davy Crockett until the present time, the border population of the Southwest have been fertile in the production of men of strongly marked individuality, and of a degree of personal prowess which seems rather to belong to the feudal age than our own Crockett Travis, Bowie, Russell and McClurg with their pistol and knife bearing colleagues, passed away before the war but the war itself with its countless incitements to enterprise and adventure brought to the surface a 'new set,' not at all behind their predecessor in any of their distinguishing characteristics

I think I may fairly say that the men I am now speaking of as a class, took their sides in the great struggle more by the accidents of the time than in obedience to the dictates of any great principle The frontiers and the territories the 'men of the Plains,' sent their recruits almost indifferently to both sides Ben McCulloch's famous 'Texan Rangers' found themselves almost equally divided and at the battle of Pea Ridge some fought under and some fought against their old comrade and commander—and in many cases they neither knew no cared why

Of course however the better 'fighting blood' of their class and training manifested itself in their new circumstances

"FATE ARNOLD"

As a sample man, par excellence, on our side, I have selected the well known scout, "Fate Arnold,' of whose career so many anecdotes have already found their way into the newspapers

A native of Arkansas brought up in that utter recklessness of the law and life which in those days distinguished the southwestern Alsatia, a square built, muscular, wiry man, of a little over medium height, a dead shot and a capital horseman, possessing the most desperate courage, in fact utterly indifferent to personal peril he became one of the most efficient scouts of the Federal army

There was some story of wrong and outrage some burning and plundering of his humble home by the remorseless guerrillas, with a darker shadow to it, of which he never chose to say much, which added to the hot blood of revenge to a nature needing very little stimulation.

CHARACTERISTICS AND EXPLOITS.

He was familiar with every highway and byway of the regions in which he served, and was as fond of the war path and its incidents and excitements as ever any Indian warrior In fact, spite of his hazel eyes and his dark brown hair, there was much of the Indian in his appearance, especially as he steadily adhered to the buckskin leggings, the blanket coat Mexican spurs and other peculiar habiliments of the 'men of the Plains'

What I may say of him must be taken in view of the credibly attested declaration that he has killed over 100 men in close combat These were mostly guerrillas, and so great was the dread in which he was held by the predatory bands in that region, that his presence or his well known 'spotted horse,' was considered enough of itself to cause the boldest of them to move their camp to a less dangerous neighborhood

That horse, a singular animal, of almost human intelligence, was a part of the spoils of one of his early raids and was presented to him by the Union general commanding, in recognition of his daring courage I do not know what has since become of it, but its career was almost as thrilling as that of its master

So many men were killed from off his back, that at last no man could be found hardy enough to mount him except "Fate" himself There was a strong feeling of superstition among the border men both as to horse and rider Both were considered "uncanny," and especially to be avoided

GUERILLA HUNTS

Shortly after he joined the Union forces a gang of about 40 guerillas, under a leader named Jack Hackelroads committed some outrages near Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and "Fate' went after them with five men He followed them into the Ozark mountain country, and only four or five out of the 40 escaped to tell the tale of that terrible six weeks of trailing, ambuscading and bush fighting Arnold himself is said to have picked off singly nearly one-half of the marauders

Shortly after this a gang of the worst desperadoes that ever disgraced the earth commenced operations in Johnson county near Clarksville where Arnold was stationed They went to the house of a defenseless old man and put him to what was then and there called 'the rack"—to wit they trussed him up to four posts set in the ground, built a slow fire under him and asked him where he had hidden his money Not having any he could not tell them and the fire burned on remorselessly until he was roasted to death This, by the way, was no uncommon experiment or result for those days in the Southwest We who fought through there can testify to meeting such men and such incidents many a time, during our experience on what has better earned the title of 'the dark and bloody ground' than ever Kentucky did during the days of Daniel Boone and his compeers

Well 'Fate' swore vengeance, and swore that he would "clean out' that gang There were plenty of willing tongues to carry the threat and in a few days he received a counter message couched in such terms as roused all the border man within him With some difficulty he obtained permission from his commanding officer to "go on a scouting expedition He started with his trusty lieutenant and ten men—twelve in all—well mounted, armed and appointed Forty eight hours thereafter he returned with the loss of only one man wounded, but drew up in front of headquarters with eleven riderless horses saddles and all complete, and with the blood chilling assurance that the guerrilla gang supposed to number some 30 to 40, was 'wiped out" At least none of them ever returned to disturb the quiet of Johnson county Whether or not they fell in open conflict no historian of that brief but bloody expedition has ever recorded

FIGHT FOR A BRACE OF PISTOLS

His next adventure to be related here was in connection with a noted 'border ruffian" named Hardgreaves, or something like it, who won an unenviable reputation for atrocities which stood out in bold relief from even that dark background Hardgraves possessed a remarkable fine brace of pistols, handsomely mounted and noted among the border men for their accuracy and for their singularly bloody history

After one of the worst and most daring exploits of their own "Fate declared to his comrades that 'he must have those pistols" and started off alone, although Hardgreaves was known to have a stong party with him He swore that he would 'fetch him, if he had to follow him through the nation" The Cherokee and Choctaw country is familiarly known in the Southwest as "the nation" and Arnold merely meant that he would keep the trail until he struck the Texas line In about three weeks he rode up in front of his headquarters, greeted by an admiring throng which included nearly the whole brigade and in reply to the numerous inquiries, simply exhibiting his trophies remarking Well boys I've got the pistols He was not much inclined to boast of his exploits and that brief declaration was all I ever got out of him as to his experiences on the Texas trail What they really were can, perhaps, be far better imagined than described

HIS STATE OF FIGHTING

It seemed to make but little difference to Fate Arnold what might be the number of his enemies He would ride up to an encampment of the guerillas who were the especial objects of his hatred and vengeance mark the position of their bivouacs and watchfires and then mounted on his dreaded spotted horse ride through the encampment firing right and left with an aim all the more deadly because the reckless marksman was indifferent to the consequences of any return bullets Of course he was frequently wounded for the men opposed to him were as nearly as possible of like metal with himself and he is now if still alive which I do not know a mere battered wreck of his former iron self But his last and most dangerous hurt was received in a cause which would have done honor to any knight of old

A KNIGHTLY DEED

A poor woman whose husband was in our army was falsely reported to be in possession of a sum of money and a gang of the unutterable miscreants of the border surprised her in her humble cabin to rob her of her supposed treasure Her two little children twins, were playing by the hearth, and the robbers threatened to murder them if she did not at once disclose her hidden treasure

The appeal to her mother's instinct was strong enough but she had nothing to reveal, nor did she believe that the world contained brutes vile enough to carry out such hellish forewarnings She was mistaken—the fiends dashed out the brains of the infants by knocking their heads one against the other and the heart broken mother was a maniac from that hour

CONCLUSION

Fate Arnold had been discharged from the service, for the "war was over,' but he immediately called together a dozen of his old comrades, about equal in number to the guerrillas, and started forth They fell into an ambuscade set by their destined prey, and suffered severely Arnold was shot through the body, but, after he was fatally wounded, as was supposed, killed two of his assailants Hardly more than half of his party returned, bringing with them their bleeding leader, but only one of the ambuscaders carried the story of that close and desperate fight into the low countries"—N Y Evening Post.

The New Orleans Riot Investigation

WASHINGTON, December 14 —Representatives Campbell and Taylor having each successively declined serving on the special committee to investigate the subject of the New Orleans riots, the Speaker has appointed Representative McCulloch to fill the vacancy The committee will, therefore, consist of Messrs. Elliot, of Massachusetts; Shellabarger, of Ohio, and McCulloch, of Maryland. Subpœnas have already been sent to New Orleans for witnesses, and Sergeant at-Arms Ordway expects to accompany the committee to New Orleans on Monday

The witnesses to the New Orleans riots who are now in Washington, and some of whom have already been before the Congressional Committee, have given expression to the following facts, which are substantially, it is said, as they have testified to before the committee One of these witnesses is Rufus King Cutler, formerly a member of the 1864 and July 30th Conventions, and United States Senator elect from Louisiana He has left Louisiana on account of persecution for Union sentiment, never again to return until Louisiana becomes a loyal State and New Orleans becomes a loyal city He probably knows more than any other man of the causes and character of the convention, and of the riots and the present condition of Louisiana, which he gives up to the present time He says the members of the convention were literally disarmed and their suspicions allayed totally beyond the power of self-defense by the proclamation of Mayor Monroe, advising the citizens of New Orleans to keep away from the Mechanics' Institute during the forthcoming sitting of the convention, the effects of which proclamation was the very reverse from what it was pretended to have been, that there was no resistance to peaceable arrests, made or contemplated by the members of the convention, that not a shot was fired nor a missile thrown by them, that no arrests were attempted to be made by the police until they had fired and killed and wounded several inside the hall, when they found the members of the convention sitting quietly in their seats, unarmed, and asking protection, that the police commenced the onslaught in organized bodies, having repaired to the street in front of the Institute, in squads, at the hour named for the assembling of the convention, and that everything appeared to be preconcerted, and all their plans were carried out with bloody determination He says there were four or five hundred police, or those having partial police insignia There was a recess in the convention, when the firing commenced in the street, the Sergeant-at-Arms being absent looking up a quorum, and that it was the intention of the convention to adjourn if no quorum could be found He says that the only cause of the riot was the hatred toward the United States, which took this way to manifest itself, but that the convention met for the purpose of enfranchising the blacks, disfranchising rebels, and passing the Constitutional amendment, provided a legal quorum could be procured. Flags of truce and the American flag were displayed from the windows of the convention, but were disregarded. Evidence is shown leading conclusively to the fact of there being a premeditated design to break up the convention by force, and retaliate its peaceable sitting by bloodshed Persons are proved to have been going around in the morning mustering for the bloody work and soliciting aid. It was the general supposition among the members that a quorum could not be raised until after the elections The police would have had no difficulty in keeping the peace or protecting the convention if they had been so disposed. The meeting on the Friday night before the convention held, as a sort of welcome to the convention, was not participated in by any member of the convention, and that fact was well known. Mr Cutler gives a very discouraging view of Louisiana society The people are more intensely hostile to the Government of the United States than ever, and he concurs with all others in the necessity of a strong military government Associations are formed among all classes for the patronage of rebels only, and the discouragement of Union men The old rebel military organizations are kept up, and it is his opinion that a large majority would readily embrace the first opportunity for independence, and that the women are more vindictive than the men, and lend constant encouragement to their men to maltreat and drive out of the city Union men. It was not the purpose of the convention to put into operation the proposed Constitution without submitting it to the people and that was everywhere understood The convention had no thought of deserving or receiving violence—nothing at most more than an arrest, to which it was their determination to submit No steps have yet been taken by the civil authorities to apprehend the perpetrators of the massacre

THE STATE DEBT OF CALIFORNIA —The Alta furnishes the following interesting review of this subject

According to a statement made by the Treasurer of State, the funded debt of California amounted on the 1st of January, 1867, to $5,321,000 of which bonds to the sum of $3,774,000 were issued for the civil debt of the State, and $1,546,000 for the relief of and bounty to soldiers during the rebellion All these bonds bear seven per cent interest and the total annual interest on them is $372 540 The State has besides promised to pay $105,000 annually on the bonds of the Central Pacific Railroad Company, until 1885, so that the total yearly burden for interest on the tax payers is $447 540, or nearly half a million dollars To pay this interest and to raise money for the redemption of the bonds, the State levies a tax of 56¼ cents on each one hundred dollars of taxable property, and the property that pays taxes is about $180,000,000 The Controller's table says the total valuation is $200 000,000, but from this about $20 000 000 must be deducted for exemptions, double valuations, mortgages etc, on which no tax is paid The yield of 56¼ cents on $180 000,000 is about $1,000,000, of which nearly half goes for interest and the remainder for redemption At that rate the debt ought to be paid off in ten years The debt decreases half a million and the taxable property increases ten millions annually, so the prospect before us is a good one The total State tax on the one hundred dollars of taxable property is $1 13, of which 56¼ cents is for the funded debt 30¾ for general expenses, 10 for the capitol 8 for schools, 5 for military purposes, and 3 for the Insane Asylum

WHISKY SO CALLED —If the temperance societies would publish the revelations recently made as to the way in which whisky is manufactured in New York it would have more effect on the cause than volumes of didactic reasoning It is conclusively shown that men whose digestive organs are not iron clad cannot drink the liquor of modern times with impunity The manufacturer is not content with making a harmless imitation, but is led by avarice to reduce the strength of the alcohol one half by adding water and putting in fiery substances that the deception may not be discovered Thus the liquid burns the throat of the drinker who is thereby led to believe it is strong The recipe generally used is as follows To 40 gallons common whisky add 30 gallons water, 5 gallons tincture of Guinea pepper 1 quart tincture of kellitory, 2 ounces acetic ether 1½ gallons strong tea To improve the flavor of this whisky add three ounces pulverized charcoal and four ounces ground rice to a gallon of spirits letting it stand for a week and stirring it every day —Portland Press

TUESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 22, 1867.

Talk of a Conservative.

The New York Evening Post is one of those "Conservative Republican" papers which are about as often against the Republican party as with it. The Evening Post has tried hard to sustain the President, and has framed an abundance of excuses and pretexts for doing so. Yet even this paper can find no excuse for his course in clinging to a theory already so utterly repudiated by the people. It declares that a statesman of large and broad views would see the necessity and expediency of each of the four guarantees embraced in the proposed amendment, at least three of which flow logically from the principles already incorporated in the fundamental law. It declares that the President is responsible for the failure thus far to finish the work of reorganization; for, had he urged the foregoing plan upon the South as he urged the amendment abolishing slavery, he could have secured its adoption, and the whole question at issue would have been definitively settled. The Post says that Mr. Johnson too often forgets his own theory of the supremacy of the Constitution, to render his course a consistent one. He could interfere to enforce the adoption of the anti-slavery amendment, and all was strictly constitutional. But he deems that he can not, consistently with his constitutional obligations, repeat what he has once already done. In dealing with the Louisiana case, he again forgot his theory, rendering it utterly impossible for him to defend himself on any consistent principles.

GREELEY'S MISTAKE.—It appears that Horace Greeley, by his recent manifesto in favor of a general amnesty, has utterly ruined his chances for political preferment. Since his famous "allocution" was published, the Republican papers of New York have treated him to a merciless excoriation. The following in regard to this manifesto of Greeley's is from a paper published in the interior of New York:

> What business has Horace Greeley asking the Republican party to vote for him for Senator, when he takes direct issue with that party. Universal amnesty is not a new question. It was introduced at the last session of Congress, and almost unanimously rejected by that body. And is a man fit for United States Senator who talks now of universal amnesty, with no conditions attached, without any guaranties for the payment of the national debt, or the repudiation of the confederate debt? In what consists the crime of Andrew Johnson if it is not this very same effort to place power again in the hands of traitors? We think Greeley is condemned by his own words, even as Johnson was, while he was swinging around the circle.

Greeley is always making mistakes, and this last one is equal to any of his many former blunders.

The Demopolis (Alabama) New Era takes the result of "the late elections" philosophically, and comments in a refreshing and spirited manner. The shocking indifference for the future that may be in store for the President, precludes all hope of the editor of the New Era rising to the dignity of Postmaster of Demopolis:

> As was to be expected the late elections at the North have gone for the Radicals, the devil or any other man. Well, who cares? We, as a people, have nothing to do in the premises. We are not interested in running the machine at Washington. We had nothing to do in making Andy Johnson President of the 'galorious' Union, and all the Radicals outside of the infernal regions are not indebted to us for a single vote; and whether they impeach the President, assassinate him, hang, shoot, quarter, behead or burn him for witchcraft, is a matter of perfect indifference on our part, and whether Brownlow, Butler, Hamilton, or the devil who begot them, attempts a second overthrow of the South, as a matter of course we have no hand in the affair.

MINORCA.—Not long ago the telegraph advised us that our Government was endeavoring to purchase of Spain the Island of Minorca in the Mediterranean. Minorca is one of the Balearic Islands, lying east of Spain. They are five in number and contain a population of about 240,000. Minorca is the most easterly of the group. It has an area of about 300 square miles, with a population of 44,000. The coast is indented on every side with small bays, several of which form excellent harbors. Port Mahon, the Capital of Minorca, is said to have one of the very best harbors in the Mediterranean. The island is one of great commercial importance, but it is very doubtful if Spain will cede it away, as her traditional policy has ever been not to give up any possessions she could retain.

On the occasion of the Congressional Republican caucus at Washington, while Raymond was imploring not to be kicked out, Morrill, of Vermont, requested that he might be permitted to remain, remarking in a spirit of true orthodoxy that

> "While the lamp holds out to burn
> The vilest sinner may return."

This remark must have highly encouraging and edifying to the penitent Raymond.

The London Star says the great news in the scientific world is the arrival of an enormous aerolite, sent to the Academy of Science by Marshal Bazaine from Mexico. It weighs 870 kilogrammes. It was sent as a present to Marshal Vaillant, who has had it placed in the Museum of Natural History, where it attracts great attention. It will be shown at the Great Exhibition of 1867, among other scientific curiosities.

The Umatilla Press is still slashing away at A. Johnson. It has reason. We don't know which has been the most deeply outraged by this man,—the negro or the Democratic party. He undertook to play the "Moses" for both of them, and in both cases signally failed. He has left the Democratic party in the wilderness, just as he aforetime abandoned the negro in the same predicament.

Concerning Gov. Brownlow's health, a Nashville correspondent writes:

> "The emaciated form of the heroic old man is still a terror to the unreconstructed in this State. Though he was lying upon a lounge when we saw him to-day in his office, and showed too plainly the wear and tear of his long conflicts, he could still find strong language with which to characterize the late rebellion and its late instigators."

The city of San Francisco pays $125,000 per year for lighting the streets. And the papers grumble that the streets are not better lighted. As soon as the moon rises the lights are shut off, no matter how foggy or cloudy it may be. And as the foggy nights have the best of it, the darkness is too often visible.

Calhoun Benham, late of California, and more recently of the Southern Confederacy, took the oath in Louisville, Kentucky, November 28. His application for pardon, indorsed by Gov. Bramlette, has gone to Washington under the special care of Gen. Rousseau.

It is ascertained that John Slidell, the noted rebel envoy, though once reported to be seedy and needy, is one of the wealthiest men in Paris. He made his money by acting as agent for the rebellion.

The cargo of California wheat shipped to Philadelphia by the David Crockett, netted the owners the sum of $75,000.

West Virginia contributed over 17,000 men to swell the National armies during the late rebellion.

It has been ascertained that the population of Nebraska is about 90,000.

"Traitors in Congress."

As most people are aware, the Administration has an accredited organ in this State. Whatever appears in the columns of this organ may therefore be considered as authoritatively spoken. Its editor, or editors have unquestionably been reading their master's late speeches, and so have both imbibed his ideas and acquired a peculiar felicity of expression not to be attained in any other way. By the help of this exercise they have learned to repeat, parrot-like, several of the favorite expressions of their master and benefactor. Endeavoring to imitate him, they talk flippantly about "the traitors in Congress;" designating by this term the patriotic majority of that body. This expression appears in a paper which never called Jefferson Davis a traitor; which never applied the word traitor to John C. Breckinridge or Alexander H. Stephens; which never did and never will speak of the slaveholders' rebellion as a treasonable movement; which never had a word of censure for any one connected with the traitorous Southern Confederacy; which has labored unceasingly, and which still labors, to prove that they were not traitors who lately endeavored to overturn the Government; which devotes all its energies to finding excuses for the rebellion and of clearing the actors in it of the charge of treason; which never speaks of any person who took part in the late attempt to divide the Union but in terms of sympathy, kindness and respect; which never spoke of members of the rebel Congress as traitors, and which never had a word of commendation for the defenders of the Union and the champions of liberty,—this is the paper which stigmatizes men of approved patriotism as the "traitors in Congress,"—though more than a score of these men have fought on bloody fields to avert the ruin into which traitors were endeavoring to plunge the country. The term "traitors in Congress" is bandied by an individual whose youth, manhood and old age have been devoted to the service of the traitors of the South; by a person whose highest ambition has ever been to be a toady of the slave-holding chivalry; by a person whose political views have ever been identical with those who for thirty years plotted to destroy the Union; by one who, all this time, has advocated the very doctrines which gave rise to the rebellion; by one who, while the rebellion was in progress defended it on principle, and who, since it has been put down, has labored almost without rest or sleep to show that the rebels did no wrong. And this is the person who talks about "the traitors in Congress!" This is he who is not ashamed to call patriots traitors, and who has no other aim in life than to make traitors appear as patriots! When he speaks of the men who by their valor and patriotism have preserved the country, the word "traitor" drops glibly from his tongue; but he would let his right hand be consumed before he would suffer it to write the odious word in connection with the name of Jefferson Davis or Robert E. Lee! Does it lie in the mouth of a man who purposely avoids calling the most guilty traitors by their right names, to apply this term to the country's noblest friends and defenders?

Idaho Legislation.

Things are "coming on" decidedly, in the Democratic Legislature of Idaho, as the following from the Statesman will show. It would seem that the Democrats of Idaho are becoming a "Church party:"

> A bill has been passed and is now in the hands of the Governor, which for terrific meanness is unequalled. The title of it should be, "An act to rob the Common School Fund and to establish the Catholic religion in Idaho Territory." It proposes to have the Controller issue $30,000 of Territorial bonds, secured by the thirty-sixth sections of school lands, to go to the maintenance of Catholic schools in this territory. How any set of men should have the effrontery to propose to endow sectarian schools at all is difficult to understand; but when we see the Legislature robbing the common school fund for that purpose, it becomes quite incomprehensible. We do not propose to argue the question with anybody. The measure is condemned by every true American, whether Democrat or Republican.
>
> The measure received a most terrible scoring at the hands of some of the members of the House when it came up upon its passage, but it was no use: the party lash was applied and it went through, by a close vote which we published in the last number. In plain English it was gotten up for the purpose of securing the influence of the Catholic priesthood for the Democratic party. We sincerely hope that the friends of the bill have secured their point. Probably it will make no difference whether the Governor veto the bill or not, the party can pass it notwithstanding. Let it pass, gentlemen, if you wish. We do not propose to discuss the matter, but be assured that no Catholic priesthood or other sectarian cabal shall ever profit one dollar by it. The people without distinction of party, will make it a test question in every election hereafter to elect men to office who will fight it in every possible shape. Every remedy known to the courts will be exhausted before the officers will be allowed to issue the bonds, and when they are issued their payment will be contested inch by inch by injunctions and litigation interminable. We can afford to have a Legislature run in the interest of the Democratic party, in fact, a majority of the people are Democratic, but they are not quite ready to have one religious creed or another fostered and supported and virtually established by law and the public school fund appropriated for that purpose. Now pass the bill, gentlemen, if you like.

The Mines of Lemhi.

The Idaho Statesman publishes the following letter concerning matters of general interest in relation to the newly discovered mines of Lemhi. Parties who came down from there last fall reported not less favorably of the mines than this correspondent:

> LEMHI, Dec. 12, 1866.
>
> I arrived at Bannack about ten days after meeting you, and in a few days after started for the Salmon river country. After traveling about sixty miles I found myself in Lemhi valley at a point some thirty miles below the low summit between this and Snake river valley, and about twenty miles above old Fort Lemhi, and forty miles above the confluence of the Lemhi and main Salmon rivers. The Lemhi valley is from sixty to eighty miles in length, and for agricultural purposes will compare favorably with the Boise valley. The land on either side is claimed, (or at least the best localities) for some twenty miles along the stream. On the West bank of Salmon and opposite the mouth of Lemhi is situated the laid out city of . The place is identified by a whisky shop, store, butcher's shop, some tents, brush houses, &c. This being the end of "wo-haw" transportation, it is expected to be the depot both for the valley and the newly discovered mining camp, or, for instance what Boise City is to Boise basin. The new discovery is about fifteen miles from the above mentioned place in a westerly direction. As to the richness or extent of the diggings, I am not competent to say at present. I made a flying visit to the basin, but being taken with a violent attack of the rheumatism I was compelled to return to the valley. What I did see and learn of the camp I like. There is probably one hundred men wintering in the basin. Hundreds have laid their claims over until spring and gone to different localities to winter. Summing the whole matter up, I believe this camp will be at least next best to Boise basin ever discovered in Idaho.
>
> When I got here I learned there had been steps taken for the organization of a new county, which I do believe to be highly necessary for the public good. Being situated as we are so far from a county seat, and being separated from those counties by the great divide between the waters of Salmon and Boise rivers, the legislature cannot fail to see the fairness of our request.

In the last number of the San Francisco Times we find the following:

> About half-past eleven o'clock last night, a young waiter girl in the "Flag of the Union" saloon, on Montgomery street, fell in a fit. Her cries attracted a large crowd, and it was some time before a carriage could be obtained to convey her home. Between the paroxysms she would not speak to those around her, but cried to her mother; whether alive or dead, no one there knew. "Mother, oh, mother! don't curse me! Don't curse your daughter? I will do anything for you, but if I die, don't curse me!" Intemperance was probably the immediate cause of her suffering.

There are five survivors of the Dartmoor prisoners still living at Nantucket, natives of the island.

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 3, 1866.

To-day Congress again set its machinery in motion. Among the first resolutions introduced, was one calling on the President for information with regard to the evacuation of Mexico by the French, which had been promised to be done in part in November last.

Sumner again called up his bill to provide for negro suffrage in this District. There seems to be a disposition to pass this bill. Senator Williams introduced a bill to regulate the tenure of offices. It provides that the President shall not have the power to remove officers during the recess of the Senate—except for cause—as malfeasance in office and other misdemeanors. He will urge the speedy passage of the bill. It is designed as a check on this wholesale removal from office and appointment of men without the consent of the Senate. A bill was also introduced in the Senate to provide for the election of a Public Printer by the joint action of the two houses of Congress, which will have the effect to do away with C. Wendell, Esq., the present incumbent, who was Buchanan's public printer and a violent anti-war peace Democrat. The President's Message continued the old story which was his great theme while swinging round the circle. It was received with a smile by the radicals and with half-concealed feelings of disgust by the conservatives. He indicates in this message that he intends to stand upon the same platform on which he was defeated at the late elections.

While the Conservatives feel that the game is up with them, the Radicals are going at their business with a will, and there is every indication that they will adopt decided and radical measures for the management of the Southern question.

In regard to the appointment of Mr. O. Humason as Collector of the Port at Astoria, it will be very apt to be roughly handled in the Senate, as Mr. Henderson is determined to defeat his confirmation, and Humason's connection with the attempt at bribery in Oregon will induce Senator Williams also to oppose him. Men appointed to office for Oregon and the adjoining Territories who were in favor of the prosecution of the war, and good, competent men, will be confirmed; but Williams is determined to fight all Copperheads under all circumstances. Should this bill pass, which Senator Williams has to-day introduced, it will thoroughly protect the present office-holders.

There is one thing in this connection which I desire to call the attention of your readers to, and that is the general impression among the Federal office-holders in Oregon that Nesmith has been and is all-powerful to keep them in office, and all those who still retain their places give the credit to the good will of Nesmith toward them. In many respects this is doubtless correct, since Nesmith is well disposed toward some of the office-holders; yet the fact that they were retained is in great part due to the judicious course Williams took with the heads of Departments in fraternizing with them and putting his opposition to the Administration on dignified and honorable grounds, and his having made great exertion to maintain them in office. And it has been a grave error on the part of some of them to toady to Nesmith, supposing that he was their benefactor; and should this bill pass, as it doubtless will, they will then realize that Williams has greater power than Nesmith over this matter. I enclose you a copy of Senator Williams' bill. [We have already published it.—ED. OREGONIAN.] A similar measure will be introduced into the House by Stevens.

To-night there will be given a general banquet to Members of Congress—to the Radicals—the particulars of which I may write you in another letter.

DOGBERRY.

A Lake of Oil.

The following communication, says the Rochester (New York) Union, from a gentleman of Oil Rock, West Virginia, will be read with interest, as it relates to the wonderful discovery of a lake of oil in a cave, and the loss of young Temple, who went in with a friend to explore this oleaginous cavern. It will be seen by the letter that the search for the body of Temple has revealed the body of another person supposed to belong in the region:

> OIL ROCK, Dec. 5th.
>
> EDITORS UNION—I noticed in your paper of Nov. 15th, an account of the drowning of young Temple in a lake of oil, and thinking you would be interested in all that relates to this unhappy affair, I am induced to write you a few lines in reference to it.
>
> I have just returned from "Burning Springs" where I went in company with hundreds of others to witness the search for the body of young Temple. The excitement and confusion reminded me of what I once witnessed at Niagara Falls in trying to release the poor fellow who so tenaciously held to the log on the brink of the falls. A thousand and one suggestions were made only to give place to others; but finally it was agreed upon that only five persons should go into the cave, taking with them grabs, valve-sockets, jars, star reamer and sand pump. Each one was provided with a common Drick lamp, with an improved patent wick, which consists of cotton flannel saturated with a composition which prevents the flame from igniting the gas.
>
> After two hours' absence, these men came out and reported that they were unable to reach bottom, but in few places, with the ordinary sand pump rope. In the meanwhile, Major Hart, of the Chicago House, with his usual zeal, succeeded, with four others, in bringing a boat on their shoulders to the mouth of the cave. This was launched upon the lake and with the use of a small seine a body was drawn out; but as yet no one has been found who can recognize it as the body of young Temple. Mr. Steinway has been sent for, and if he does not recognize the body, the search will be continued to-morrow.
> Consternation is depicted upon the countenances of all the well borers in this locality, growing out of a report that the Rathburn Oil Company have concluded a contract with Daniel Whitman for the laying of a tube, two feet in diameter, from the lake to the Kanawha river. The lessees claim that it is from this source they draw their oil; and as evidence of this, they will be able to prove that the Braiden well, which flowed (estimated) 5,000 barrels in thirteen hours, lowered the lake three inches. All sorts of law is threatened, but the most feasible plan, in my mind, is the calling of a mass convention, to be held at Elizabeth, the county seat of Wirt county, the coming month, to develop some plan for a united effort of all the oil men to explore the inlet to this lake.

MY POLICY IN TEXAS.—The "Legislature of Texas" which lately adjourned was eminently conservative. Indeed, some of the members seem to have taken the sentiments expressed by the Rev. Petroleum V. Nasby in earnest. The bill making intermarriages between whites and persons of color penal, and taking care not to punish them for living together without being married, looks like carrying out an idea of the Rev. Petroleum. Though the action of the Legislature would imply that there was danger that such intermarriages might become frequent, there seems to be no apprehensions on that score. The acts in regard to labor, trespass and apprenticeship, together with the Stay, Exemption and County Court Acts, constitute a cunningly devised system for the practical restoration of slavery. The chief problem to be solved by the Legislators, was, how to make contracts for labor specifically enforceable, and, at the same time, by means of stop and exemption laws, the contracts to pay for the labor unenforceable. By means of the County Court Act, the poor freedmen may be got at on many criminal charges without the intervention of a Grand Jury. As Judge Roberts, the President of the Secession Convention of Texas of 1861, and Burnett, the United States Senators elect, cannot take the test oath, the Legislature has made them a handsome appropriation out of the State Treasury to enable them to act as lobby members.

"CRIMINAL" JUSTICE IN ENGLAND.—The English papers are discussing the administration of justice in minor matters in that country, and give the following examples:

A man was condemned to seven years' penal servitude and transportation for stealing two tame rabbits! and another man to twelve months' imprisonment for manslaughter!

A man was found guilty of manslaughter for killing an old woman by furious driving, and sentenced to eight months' imprisonment; while a woman has been sent into penal servitude for seven years for stealing a yard of ribbon, valued at sixpence.

A woman went into a church ostensibly to say her prayers, and took a book worth three shillings and sixpence, which she pawned for twopence to get a little bread. She was imprisoned for three months.

A child three years old, in Dublin, was arrested for begging. He was sentenced to hard labor in Richmond Bridewell for fourteen days. A report of the case has been forwarded to Government.

The Carlisle Examiner says a postoffice inspector has come specially from London to Carlisle, for the purpose of inquiring into the death of a dog which a rural postman shot in self-defense!

STATE ITEMS.

A Chinaman committed suicide in Jackson county a few days ago by taking opium. Cause; "heap no likee work."

The Sentinel is informed that the persons wounded in the riot near Roseburg are doing well, none of them being likely to die, except under the hands of the hangman.

The Democrat says of the finances of Linn county: There is a grand total of liabilities, now outstanding, of $18,231 45. To offset this there were, on the 6th day of July last, assets amounting in the aggregate to $5,694 28. These assets are composed of sundry delinquent taxes—one-half of which will never be collected.

We learn, says the Sentinel, that the effects of the late heavy storm were severely felt at Ellensburg. The surf was higher than known for many years. Several houses were totally destroyed at that point, and some others badly injured. The furious gale experienced there, swept down whole forests of timber, and left the trails in a very bad condition.

PLEASURE.—It should be part of every child's education to witness some pleasure in its youth. How contented are men who have passed part of their young years in joy! It is a pleasure to look on their smiling countenances and read therefrom that they indeed think life a pleasure, especially when they can purchase such nice clothes as KOHN & FISHEL have for sale at such low rates.

NEW ARRANGEMENT.—THE OLD BUCHTEL & CARDWELL PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY, 80 First Street, has passed into the hands of JOSEPH BUCHTEL, Proprietor and Operator, who, having just returned from San Francisco, with ALL THE LATE IMPROVEMENTS, is prepared to take every style of picture known to the art.

THE OYSTERS

PACKED BY

Louis M'Murray & Co.

OF BALTIMORE,

ARE ACKNOWLEDGED BY THE ENTIRE SAN Francisco Jobbing trade to be beyond comparison the best that come to this market. That

THEIR EXCELLENCE IS NOT IMAGINARY,

Any one who has tried them will admit, and the simple secret of their superiority, lies in the extreme care and immense expense lavished upon their preparation. Each Oyster is opened by hand with the knife with strict regard to the preservation of the Liquor, by which means all the original flavor is retained. Contrast this method with the one usually pursued of opening the Oysters in bulk by steaming, by which means the native Liquor is lost, and a manufactured one is substituted, and the reason for the actual superiority of this brand is at once apparent.

General Land Office—Patents for Lands.

Will attend to procuring Patents for United States Lands, located by Land Warrants or purchased with cash. All business connected with the General Land Office, such as collecting money for lands erroneously entered with cash, or return of the Land Warrants erroneously located; the settlement of cases under the Pre-emption Laws, and examining titles, will receive prompt attention.

Bounty Land Warrants.

Will procure Bounty Land Warrants (160 acres) for each of the surviving Officers, Chaplains, Soldiers, Seamen, Marines, Clerks, and Landsmen in the Navy—Wagon Masters and Teamsters, who served in any of the wars in which the United States has been engaged since 1790 to 1861. In case of the death of any of the above, the widow or minor children are entitled.

Bounty and Arrears of Pay.

Will procure arrears of Pay due Officers, and Bounty and arrears of Pay due Soldiers, Seamen and Marines. If any of the above have died, the amount due is payable to the Widow, Children, Father and Mother, and Brother and Sister, in their turn.

Pensions.

Will procure Pensions for Officers of the Army and Navy, Soldiers, Seamen and Marines, who have been disabled by wounds received, or who contracted a disease while in the line of duty; and if any of the above were killed in battle or have died from said causes, the following are entitled to them in their order, viz: Widow, Children (under 16 years of age), Father and Mother and Sisters, if dependent upon their deceased son or brother for support, either in whole or in part.

The Pension Laws apply to all wars in which the United States have been engaged.

All communications asking advice or information should enclose postage, or whenever of a character requiring it, should be accompanied with a reasonable fee.

THE OSWEGO IRON WORKS.—The following interesting matter concerning the Oswego Iron Works, is from a paper by Mr. George H. Belden, Superintendent: "W. S. Ladd, Esq., is President of the company, and among its shareholders are numbered some of our best business men, also in San Francisco and New York City. The capital stock is $200,000. This is the first smelting furnace erected on the Pacific coast, and is situated at Oswego, on the Willamette river, eight miles south of Portland, and in the heart of a large iron ore district. The beds of ore which are already prospected, and sufficiently developed to ascertain, approximately, their amount, contain at least two hundred and fifty thousand (250,000) tons, and are from three-fourths of a mile to two miles distant from the furnace. The lands upon which the ore is found in large quantities, is contracted to the company, and is contiguous to the furnace property. The quality of ore is approximately the same throughout the entire district around the furnace, and is found under the same geological conditions, on a lava bed-rock, which overlies a basalt, and is itself covered with detritus from the high basaltic cliffs, and by gravel, clay, and sand. The beds (not veins) are irregular in shape and depth; generally inclined at an angle of eight or ten degrees, and seem to have been deposited from solution in the irregular depressions of the lava. No iron has been found except underlaid by this lava—a soft and porous rock, easily worked by pick and shovel. The stripping varies from a few inches to ten and twelve feet; no drifting or timbering will, therefore, be necessary; but the working of the mine will be by open cuts. The greatest thickness yet found in the beds, is about ten feet; though beds are known of probably not less than thirty feet in close proximity to those most developed. The analysis by Messrs. Kellogg and Hewston, of San Francisco, shows the ore to be a hydrated sesqui-oxyde: It is as follows:

Sesqui-Oxyde of Iron	77.66	per cent
Moisture	11.16	"
Insoluble Silica	11.08	"
Sulphur and Phosphorus	0.10	"
Total	100,00	per cent.

Specific gravity 4.25, yielding 54.37 per cent. of iron. The company are building a furnace (nearly completed) thirty-two feet in hight, with nine feet diameter of boshes capable of smelting 3,500 tons of pig iron per annum, with charcoal fuel, and hot blast of two pounds per square inch pressure. The masonry is of basaltic rock, massive, and reflects great credit on its builder, Mr. George D. Wilber, of Sharon, Connecticut. The arrangement of coal sheds, coal yards, casting house, blast house, dam and flume, and all other requisites, are of the most convenient and substantial character; and the whole establishment will compare most favorably in every particular with the best Connecticut blast furnaces, after which this one has been modeled. Charcoal will be made on the company's land, and the hills now resound with the chopping and blows of scores of woodmen's axes, felling the large tracts of timber, preparatory for coaling next spring, as early as our wet climate will permit. The cost of the coal will not exceed Eastern prices, and so favorably are the ore beds situated, that $1.50 per ton will cover cost of mining and delivering the same at the furnace. Nature has so thoroughly oxydized and disintegrated the ore, and it is so free from admixture with earthy or other foreign ingredients, that little or no washing and roasting will be required to fit it for the furnace. Smelting operations will be commenced by July 1st, 1867."

AN OVERDRAWN PICTURE.—The Victoria Colonist of the 18th inst., draws a very strong picture of the "hard times" ruling in Portland, professedly based on language used by the Herald of this city. We quote:

"Hard times seem to afflict the people of Portland quite as badly as they affect us. The Herald says that the dredger has been laid up because the city cannot defray the expense of running it. The Mayor has vetoed the ordinance for improving the public thoroughfares; the steamers are crowded with passengers who are leaving the country for ever, and the empty houses are counted by the hundred. Where can the discontented Victorian go to benefit himself?

We are not prepared to say whether the Herald ever used the language attributed to it; but this we know, the picture is largely overdrawn. The dredger was not laid up "because the city cannot defray the expense of running it," but because of the frequent interruptions of the work by high water. The Mayor has not vetoed an "ordinance for improving the public thoroughfares;" the ordinance vetoed, only provided for laying sidewalks, around two public blocks, where the Mayor thought there was no special need for it. The Council has again passed an ordinance providing for side-walks on two sides of one of the blocks in question, and will pass it over a veto, if one should be interposed. The steamers are not "crowded with passengers who are leaving the country forever." At least half the passengers are permanent citizens of Oregon, who go below on business, to return. The other half is made up of miners from East of the mountains, who were never residents of Oregon, much less of Portland; and a large per cent. of "discontented Victorians." There are a good many empty houses, but they are empty, not because of any decline of population, (for the population is greater now than ever before); but because of enormous high rents which drove everybody to build who could afford to do it, and to quit renting. If the Colonist will ask any of the "discontented Victorians" now doing business in Portland, whether they desire to exchange this city for Victoria, it will be at once satisfied that no "discontented Victorian" will go back to the Colonial Capital, to "benefit himself."

DRILL AND TEST OF HOSE.—Columbian Fire Co. No. 3, took their Engine down to Couch & Flanders' wharf, yesterday afternoon for the purpose of testing their new hose. The test was made under the direction of the Council's Committee on Fire and Water and the two Assistant Engineers of the Fire Department, and to ascertain whether it was such as could be accepted under the terms of contract with the makers. The hose was tested in sections two hundred and fifty feet, each, with closed butts, and stood a pressure of one hundred and fifty pounds without the least sign of distress or weak parts. The last section, tried, received an actual pressure of one hundred and eighteen pounds. The result of the test was most satisfactory, and the Committee and Engineers at once decided to accept the hose. After the testing was completed, the boys tried themselves and their "masheen" by throwing a stream through an inch nozzle attached to the end of 200 feet of hose, during which the gauge showed a pressure of 145 pounds which could have been increased easily, so far as the power of the engine is concerned. Judging from this performance, it is safe to say that the Columbian boys with their excellent engine and new hose would make short work of any ordinary fire. A large number of interested people witnessed the performance.

DECISION OF COUNTY COURT REVERSED.—The County Court at its recent term refused the application of Thos. [illegible] for a license to sell spirituous liquors in East Portland. The matter was heard at Chambers, yesterday, before Judge Shattuck, upon a writ of review, and the decision of the County Court was reversed. The Court held that where an applicant for license to sell spirituous liquors at retail duly posts his notices, presents his petition signed by the reputed majority of voters in the precinct, executes the bond and pays the money, the license is to issue as a matter of right, unless at the time a remonstrance signed by a greater number of voters is presented. Held, that a continuance of such an application for the purpose of controverting the allegation of due posting of notices and to show fraud or evasion of the law on the part of the applicant, was a proper exercise of authority, but a continuance to allow remonstrants further time to fill up the remonstrance, and overcome the petition, is erroneous. Held, that on such a continuance, the only question for consideration, is that of fraud, and the entertaining of a remonstrance, not presented on the day of application specified in the notice, is erroneous.

RECORDER'S COURT.—The cases in this court yesterday, were as follows: M. Alexander, running a dray without city license; fine and costs, $11. John Henfry, selling liquor without a city license; fine and costs, $11. Tim. D[illegible]ty, running a dray without city license; fine and costs, $11. Charles Lawrence, two charges for assault and battery and one for disorderly conduct in the street; continued till this morning. Wm. Franklin, colored, disorderly conduct by quarreling and attempting to fight with Emmore Cavalla; fined $10 and costs. Another charge against the same, for disorderly conduct and using opprobrious language in a house, continued till this morning. Emmore Cavalla, charged with disorderly conduct in the street; discharged.

LINE DOWN—FLOODS.—The telegraph line, for two or three days, has failed to work through, in consequence of the late storm which threw it down somewhere South of Roseburg. It remains down for the reason that the streams in the Southern part of the State are so swollen as to prevent their passage. Very high water is reported, also, at Eugene City, and throughout all the country above that point. The telegraph people have had a really hard time this winter to keep their line working. What with the winds, snows, rains and floods, the line has been broken down several times a week for the last two months, and it has required a constant exercise of vigilance and energy to keep it working so much as it has done.

MUSIC.—Mr. H. Guido Grob, Professor of music, has laid upon our table two pieces entitled, "My little wife and I," and "Marche D'Armes Amerique," composed by Gustav A. Scott, and published by Frisbee & Scott, San Francisco. Of the merits of the pieces, we cannot speak, for though we have any amount of music in our soul, we never could get it out through the voice. If anybody is curious to hear them executed, they should call on Mr. Grob, who will, doubtless, be pleased to gratify them.

WHAT IS IT FOR?—We noticed on the P. T. Co's wharf, yesterday, the pilot house of the old steamer Rival. Some one suggested that, as no wheel or tiller ropes were visible, it could not have been placed there for the purpose of steering the wharf—in which sage conclusion we coincided without argument, and ventured the guess that it was placed there for some other purpose, unknown to deponent.

FOUND.—Some Indians, a day or two since, found in the river below the city, a man's coat, in the pocket of which was a pocket memorandum book containing several papers indicating that the owner's name is C. Olson. Among other papers is a certificate of deposit with Wells, Fargo & Co. The name of C. Olson, carpenter, occurs in the Portland Directory. The pocket-book is in the possession of Mr. C. P. Perry for the rightful owner.

OLD PAPERS.—We received by yesterday's mail quite a number of California papers of rather an antiquated date. Since that "long ago" time when they were new, they had evidently experienced many vicissitudes of fortune. After a very brief perusal of dates, we laid them away with that tender respect which we acknowledge as due to venerable age, meet it in what shape we may.

TRI-WEEKLY BOATS TO THE CASCADES.—The steamer Hassalo will make no trip to the Cascades to-day, and hereafter, till further notice, will make but three trips a week —on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. See the notice of this new arrangement in the appropriate column.

DIPHTHERIA.—This disease is prevailing to some extent in this city. One of the students of the Academy died of it, on Sunday, after an illness of nearly two weeks.

IN DEMAND.—It will be seen by reference to our report of freights by the Alert from above, that already the Oregon City wrapping paper is a pretty constant item. The merchants here are quick to acknowledge its superior quality as compared with the imported article. We doubt if the mill will be able to keep up with the demand which so promptly meets its first efforts.

LAW LECTURE.—Judge Shattuck will deliver a lecture before the Young Mens' Law Association, at the Court House, on Thursday evening. The legal fraternity, especially, and the public generally, are invited to attend. The next lecture before this association will be delivered by Rt. Rev. Bishop Scott.

OYSTERS.—Under the head of "new to-day," will be found the advertisement of Messrs. DeWitt, Kittle & Co., of San Francisco, in which is explained the reason of the superiority of Louis McMurray & Co's Baltimore oysters. The reason is a simple one and is worth considering by oyster dealers.

WILLAMETTE FREIGHTS.—Arrived per Alert Jan. 21st—311 boxes apples, 48 hf bbls dried apples, 8 hf bbls butter, 1,108 qr sks flour, 20 bags flour, 3 boxes eggs, 5 boxes mdse, 3 kegs lard, 3 dressed hogs, 6 sks bacon, 1 shaft, 1 bale wooden goods, 3 bales Oregon City paper.

THE "FIDELITER."—A dispatch from Victoria, dated 21st, 8:30 P. M., says, "The Fideliter is here. Will sail as soon as weather permits." Signed, Henderson.

OVERCOATS.—For cape overcoats go to Barman Bros., No. 78, river side of Front street, Portland.

WANTED.—Immediately, a first rate boot maker, good wages given. Apply to Grabenheim & Cohen.

IMPORTANT TO YOUNG MEN AND PARENTS—Young men, and parents who desire to educate their sons for a successful business life, will be interested to know that the National College of Business and Commerce, is meeting with the most unbounded success, and students are daily entering from all parts of the coast.

Those who wish to obtain a thorough business education, will find this an excellent institution. Full particulars may be obtained by addressing the President, M. K. Landenslage, at Portland, Oregon.

The Indian Question.

In his annual report Gen. Sherman says:

I propose, the coming year, to restrict the Sioux North of the Platte, West of the Missouri river, and East of the new road to Montana, which starts from Laramie for Virginia City by way of Forts Reno, Philip Kearny, C. F. Smith, etc. All Sioux found outside of those lines without a written pass from some military commander, clearly defining their object, should be dealt with summarily. In like manner I would restrict the Arapahoes, Cheyennes, Comanches, Kiowas, Apaches and Navajoes, South of the Arkansas and East of Fort Union. This would leave for our people exclusively the wide belt, East and West, between the Platte and the Arkansas, in which lie the two great railroads, and over which passes the bulk of travel to the mountain territories. As long as these Indians can hunt buffalo and antelope within these limits, we will have the depredations of last summer, and worse yet, the exaggerations of danger raised by our own people, often for a very bad purpose. It is our duty, and it shall be my study, to make the progress of construction of the great Pacific railways that lie in this belt of country as safe as possible, as also to protect the stage and telegraph lines against any hostile bands; but they are so long that to guard them perfectly is an impossibility, unless we can restrict the Indians as herein stated. I beg you will submit this proposition to the Secretary of the Interior, that we may know that we do not violate some of the solemn treaties made with these Indians, who are very captious, and claim to the very letter the execution on our part of those treaties, the obligation of which they seem to comprehend perfectly.

In the Department of Dacotah I propose that Gen. Terry shall make the Missouri river as safe to boats as possible, and that he shall open and protect the new route from Minnesota to Montana, and afford the stages and wagons that travel that long and exposed route all the assistance in his power.

In the Department of the Platte I propose that Gen. Cooke shall continue to cover the building and engineering operations of the Pacific railway that is under construction up the Platte, and has accomplished two hundred and seventy-five miles of road substantially this year; that he shall next year complete the wagon road from Fort Laramie to Virginia City, which the Indians give notice they will resist. They represent it as passing through the only remaining hunting grounds they have, but this road is necessary to Montana, and must be finished and made safe. It is on this road we have encountered most trouble this year, and the Indians have killed Lieutenant Daniels, Eighteenth Infantry; twenty-four soldiers, and twenty citizens connected with the trains. All these deaths must be avenged next year. By reason of the discharge of all volunteers, and the late period at which we were provided with a regular army, we were too weak to attempt it this year, and must do so the next.

In the Department of the Missouri, General Hancock is charged with the protection of the Smoky Hill and Arkansas routes, and of the exposed settlements of Colorado and New Mexico. This is a most difficult problem. He will, of course, continue to give every assistance to the Union Pacific Railway, now down to Fort Riley, and under contract for 250 miles beyond, and he will do all that is possible to encourage and protect the settlements on the tributaries of the upper Arkansas, and along the Eastern base of the Rocky mountains. These are most important in a military sense, and they hold out the promise of a country that can now partially, and will soon be able to, feed the men and horses needed in this hitherto desolate region, at reasonable prices.

New Mexico has been settled longer than Ohio, and yet remains poor and exposed, with but a thin line of fields along the banks of the Rio Grande, liable at all times to be swept by the inroads of the Nomad Indians, that surround it. The whole territory seems a pastoral land, but not fit for cultivation. The mines undeveloped are supposed to be very valuable, but as yet remain mostly in a state of nature. We have held this territory since 1846, twenty years, at a cost to the national treasury of full a hundred millions of dollars, and I doubt if it will ever reimburse to the country a tithe of that sum. The entire population may be assumed at a hundred thousand, and the minimum force required there will not fall much short of two thousand five hundred men, which should be mostly of cavalry. Much of the food consumed by men and horses has to be hauled over 1,000 miles, at a cost of fifteen cents a pound, and the cost of every man will average $1,000 a year. General Carleton has collected 3,703 Navajoes and Apaches on a reservation at Fort Sumner, and the cost of feeding them alone is from $50,000 to $70,000 a month, though Gen. Carleton thinks they will soon be self-supporting.

The following are Boise City prices as quoted in the Statesman of the 10th inst.:

Flour, $12 50@14 00; Bacon, 45c; Coffee, 50c; Crushed Sugar, 40c; Candles, 62½c; Dried Apples, 35c; California Peaches, 45c. Beans, 25c; Syrup, $14 00; Y. Powders, 50c; Butter, 87½c; Rice, 33c; Lard, 45@50c.

The owner of an express wagon for moving purposes, at the West End, is of a Shakespearian turn, for he has this motto on his wagon: "In form and moving, how express and admirable."

Mustang Liniment.

Intrinsic virtue alone could ever insure the success met by the Mexican Mustang Liniment. For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Cuts, Bruises, Burns, Swellings, etc., upon man, or Spavin, Ringbone, Poll Evil, Scratches, Strains, etc., upon beasts, its effects are instantaneous, nothing and wonderful. It saves time, suffering and expense to have it always in the house. None genuine unless in a steel plate label, with signature of G. W. Westbrook, and having stamp of DEMAS BARNES & Co. over the top.
Sold by all Dealers.

Lyon's Kathairon.

Lyon's Kathairon is a most delightful article as a Hair Dressing—to eradicate scurf and dandruff, to keep it clean, soft, and silky, and the head cool. It also prevents the hair from falling off and turning gray, and promotes its growth upon prematurely bald heads. It is sold by all dealers. E. THOMAS LYON, N. Y.

Lyon's Extract Jamaica Ginger.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER—for Indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, etc., where a warming stimulant is required. Its careful preparation and entire purity make it a cheap and reliable article for culinary purposes. Sold everywhere, at 50 cts. per bottle. Ask for "Lyon's" Pure Extract. Take no other.

CAUTION.—See that the private U. S. stamp of DEMAS BARNES & Co. is over each bottle. None other is genuine.

Lyon's Flea Powder.

DEATH TO FLEAS.—It is well known that Lyon's genuine Magnetic Powder will perfectly destroy everything in the shape of fleas, ticks, bed-bugs, roaches, etc., that it is perfect poison to the insect tribe, but entirely harmless to the human species and domestic animals. The genuine has the signature of E. LYON, and the private stamp of DEMAS BARNES & Co. Anything else of this kind is an imitation or counterfeit: Any druggist will procure the genuine if you insist you will have no other.

STEAM POWER, NOS. 625 AND 621 FRONT ST.

HAS CONSTANTLY ON HAND GROUND AND ROASTED COFFEE, GREEN COFFEE of the best qualities. CREAM OF TARTAR and SPICES of all sorts.

The undersigned, who has always enjoyed public confidence for the excellent quality of his Coffee, neglects nothing to justify the good name acquired by his productions, the sale of which daily increases. The acknowledged superiority of his merchandise, which commands here, and in the markets of the Interior, a relatively higher price, excites the cupidity of some manufacturers, and every day he sees increasing the number of those who, by counterfeit or imitation of his mark, seek to deceive the public, palming upon them their inferior productions for the genuine G. VENARD CHARTRES COFFEE. This fraud can deceive nobody after a trial, but only adds to the favorable opinion of the consumers, the very flattering though unwilling testimony of the counterfeiters. Nevertheless, buyers should be forewarned, and placed on their guard against this practice.

[From London Society]

An Engine-Room Story

On a cold frosty December, a few years ago I was a passenger on board the fine steamer Queen from London to The voyage is not a very long one, but we were several days at sea, and during that time I struck up pretty much of an acquaintance with the second engineer of the ship I have always had a taste, rather imaginative than scientific, for watching the working of powerful machinery, the evenings were too cold to allow of remaining long on deck, and I was often glad to exchange for a time the saloon stove for the bright glow of the boiler furnaces, and the company of the passengers for a chat in the engine-room with my friend the engineer Ten o'clock in the evening, when it was his watch generally found me seated by his side on the platform that ran around the tops of the cylinders, whence he could in a moment hear any word passed from the deck, had immediate access to the handles of the engines, could see the fire-doors and stoke hole, with the glass guages in front of the boilers, and even whilst chatting with me, could be constantly alive to the smallest escape of steam, or the least jarring or chirping sound which told to his practiced eyes or ears that something about the machinery required lubrication or adjustment.

There was nothing very remarkable about my acquaintance with Angove, he was simply an honest, straightforward, intelligent, self educated mechanic, one, in short, of a class very numerous among our steamboat engineers. He was about forty years of age, and had spent nearly half that time at sea, in many services and in all parts of the world He had been in action on board of a Brazilian steam sloop, had nearly died from the intense heat in the engine-room of a Peninsular and Oriental boat in the Red Sea, had been wrecked in a West India mail steamer, and afterward discharged from the service for a smuggling transaction, with which he vowed he himself had nothing to do; was at the time the late war broke out serving on board a Russian war steamer, which of course he left as soon as possible, had served on board a river boat on the Mississippi, and another on the Hooghly, and had seen many a strange event in these and other services, from the plain matter of fact point of view natural to his temperament and education

One evening we were slipping along fast under steam and canvas, with the wind and sea on the beam, and the ship, though not pitching much, was rolling a good deal. I came shivering off the deck, where I had been smoking a cigar in the moonlight, and seated myself in the accustomed place on the engine-room platform, enjoying the warm glow from the furnaces. Angove had just lit a cigar which I gave him, when a slight escape from one of the valve stuffing boxes arrested his attention. The platform on which we had our seat was on a level with the tops of the cylinders, with a railing nearly breast high between it and the engines, and to get at the stuffing box in question it was necessary, in order to avoid being struck by the bars of the parallel motion, to wait until the engine took her down stroke, and then vault it over the rail to the top of the cylinder cover, before she came up again Taking a spanner to screw down the gland, Angove awaited the proper moment and vaulted over the rail, but at that instant the ship took a heavier roll than ordinarily, his foot slipped on the greasy, sloping surface of the false cover, and he had the narrowest escape possible from being precipitated headlong among the working parts of the machinery. He saved himself just in time by catching hold of the cylinder cross head, but this cross head worked up to within half an inch of one of the deck beams, and before he could withdraw his hand the two were nearly close together, the smallest conceivable space of time longer and his hand would have been crushed between them, such close work was it, that he actually felt the squeeze, and the skin was red with the pressure

I know I was terribly frightened, and started up pale and horror struck, but Angove finished his work coolly, vaulted out again over the rail, and seated himself at my side, a little pale, but perfectly calm and self possessed, and smoked away his cigar as if nothing had happened

"My dear fellow," I cried, "what a narrow escape! I thought it was all over with you "

"Yes, indeed," he said, "it was close work But, thank God, it is all right A very small fraction of a second longer"—looking at his hand—"and my power of using hammer and chisel would not have been of much account."

We sat for some minutes without speaking, both, no doubt, meditating on what had occurred; and then, full of the subject, I said

"It must be very dangerous work, going about the engines in really bad weather?"

"Yes, it is," he said, "especially in some engine-rooms, nearly as bad, I think, as it is for the sailors to go aloft But I have always been very fortunate "

"Did you ever meet with an accident?" I asked

"No" he replied, "but I was very near one once—a worse one, perhaps, than even this would have been—and yet it was not exactly an accident, either."

"What was it, then?" I asked

"Well," he said, "it is a subject on which I don't much like to speak, and, indeed, I have never told the whole story to any one, but I think a sufficiently long time has now elapsed, and I may as well give it to you since you are pleased to say you like hearing my little adventures.

"It was many years ago, when the California gold diggings were attracting everybody's attention, that I went out as third engineer of a steamer from Panama to San Francisco I liked the Captain very much, and I had known him by sight before, though he didn't know me, for a short time previously he had several times come on board a ship, to which I then belonged at New York, to see the Captain, who was a friend of his Once or twice he had brought off his wife and little daughter with him—such a sweet, lady-like young woman, and such a dear little girl—I recollect taking them down once and showing the engines—and the lady appeared so fond of her husband I I wondered how he could leave them to come on this station, in that lawless time of gold seeking Our chief engineer, too, was a good sort of a man, and one who knew his work well, the second wasn't a bad fellow, either, though too fond of his glass, but the rest of the officers and crew were not pleasant shipmates. The ship was not a comfortable one to me in any respect, and I soon determined that my first voyage in her should be my last though we had first rate wages to induce us to stick by the ship at San Francisco, and not run away to the gold diggings

"We arrived out safely, without any adventure, but we had to wait a long time there before we could sail on our homeward voyage Notwithstanding all precautions, a great many of our crew ran away, and it was impossible to replace them indeed, the harbor was full of ships lying useless there for want of crews to take them away But we had also another loss, and a great one, in our chief engineer He had been ailing on the voyage out, and he died, poor fellow! whilst we were lying in the harbor Our second was not exactly the person to take charge of the engines, being as I have said, rather too fond of drink, and the captain, we heard, was trying all he could do to get some one in our chief's place Macpherson, the second, was of course very indignant at this—but so it was

"I should think we must have been quite two months at San Francisco before we were ready to sail again—for you must understand that we were not a regular packet on the station but had been specially chartered for the voyage out—and we thought that we were going, after all, without any new chief engineer We in the engine room were pleased at this, for Macpherson was a good sort of a fellow enough except for that fault which I have mentioned, and a first rate workman but on the very last day before sailing the captain of whom we had seen but little for some time past came on board with a person whom he introduced to the engine room hands as their new chief

"He was not the only new arrival on board There were a few—very few—passengers, and a lady, who I heard, to my astonishment was the captain's wife, whom he had married since we had been at San Francisco Now, as I have already told you, I had seen his wife and little daughter but a short time before, so you may think how much I was surprised at seeing this other woman brought on board as his wife now I was very much surprised at our captain whom I had taken for a different sort of man but it was no business of mine, so I held my tongue about it This new woman that he had now was very handsome certainly, though of a bold masculine style of beauty, and with such an eye! I thought I shouldn't exactly like her for a wife myself though she was really handsome and it was no wonder that any man should be taken up with her

Right or wrong I form my opinions of people pretty quickly and I didn't like our chief He was quiet and mild in his manners certainly—wonderfully so for that time in that part of the world—but there was a wild, dissipated wicked look, if you understand me, in his eye, which seemed to me to tell that he could be very different if he chose I could not help remarking to Macpherson that I thought we had a rum one to deal with now and he replied that he should like to know his history for he guessed that it was a strange one

"One thing was evident to me from the first time he came into the engine-room—he was not a practical working engineer That he knew something about engines was plain and he gave his orders with decision, and without any apparent doubt of himself but there was a theoretical rather than a practical twang about them as if his knowledge of marine engines had been gained rather by study than by experience His hands were too white and delicate for a man who had used the hammer and chisel and file much, and coming into the engine room suddenly on the evening before we sailed, I found him doing some job at the vice which was fixed there—something for himself, I fancy, and not for the engines—and from the manner in which he handled his tools, it was plain that he was no workman I set him down in my own mind for a civil engineer, who had come out to the diggings had got a bad run of luck and was glad to work his way home as best he could.

"At length we were ready for sea, having taken on board a small cargo, and also some gold on its way to the States We had beautiful weather down the coast, and for some time nothing unusual occurred Macpherson and I kept watch and watch alternately, our new chief taking none Indeed he came very seldom into the engine room at all, and, when he did, he interfered with nobody He would just glance at the guages, open a fire door and look in, and feel the heat of the condensers, but he would make no remark, unless there was a little escape of steam, or anything of that sort, which a child might notice He seldom found fault with anybody, and very often, indeed almost every night, he used to send down grog to the stokers and trimmers on watch, so that they began to consider him a sort of sea angel, and to wish that they could always have him for a chief Our captain, too, appeared to think more of his wife than of the ship, and also seemed to me to be drinking pretty much, and Macpherson soon found that he might take his drop when he liked, having nobody to find fault with him but myself, who was his subordinate So, altogether, discipline became very lax, and except for the mates, we were quite a happy family at sea. I could not help fancying, however, that it was all too good to last, and so it turned out

"We had got well down the coast, and I know we were not far off the land, when one night—a fine night it was, but very dark—it was my watch below from midnight till four in the morning When I say 'my watch below,' you know, sir, I do not mean my watch below, in the engine room, but my turn to be off duty. Macpherson and I occupied as a sleeping cabin one of the deck houses abaft the paddle wheel, in which were two bunks, one over the other, one his and the other mine At eight bells—12 o'clock, you know—I called him, and he turned out as usual, and went to take charge of the engine room, whilst I turned into my bunk and tried to go to sleep. Now to sleep close behind a paddle box with the wheel but a foot or two from your head, is, for those unaccustomed to it, rather a difficult operation, especially when the ship is rolling There is a creak and a buzz, as your side rises with the roll, and a roar, and a bang, and a shock, and a splutter as your wheel is in its turn half buried in the sea, with a continual trembling and shake, never ceasing for a moment, which, altogether, render sleeping in such a position an art only to be acquired by long practice, and, as I have said, not always to be depended upon even then. I can sleep as well as most people, and am not at all a particular man in such matters but on the night in question, although there was not much sea on, I soon found that any attempt to get a sleep in my bunk was hopeless. I could not afford to throw away my four hours in thinking about it, so, turning out again without much delay, I went below to the engine room, and crept into a snug little spot between the starboard cylinder and the forward bulkhead of the engine room, which had several times before, on our outward voyage, been used for a similar purpose. I must describe the engine room to you. It was very much like this one The engines were side-levers like these, and the stoke hole, with its fire doors, was adjoining the engine room, without any separation between The cylinders were forward, about four feet from the bulkhead, and the boilers and stoke-hole were aft There was a platform, just like this, at the level of the tops of the cylinders, on each side of the engine room, and across the forward part of it, close to the bulkhead, with ladders at the after ends of the two side platforms leading down to the stoke-hole, and another at the middle of the part that went across, by which you descended to a narrow passage between the engines, where the starting handles, etc., were placed At the same part of the platform was the ladder which communicated with the deck

"You will see from this that there was at the forward end of the engine-room, having the cylinders and ends of the engines on one side of it, the bulkhead on the other, and the cross platform for a roof, a space about four feet wide, and in length the whole width of the ship The port side of this space was filled with tallow casks, oil cans, etc, for which there was not room in the store closet, but on the starboard side there was a nice snug little spot, kept tolerably cool, though so near the cylinders, by the draught of air from the deck, and through some holes in the bulkhead, from the forehold This snuggery was approached by a narrow passage on the starboard side of the ship—for the ladders and the deck pump prevented your getting in from between the engines, and the donkey-engine was in the way on the port side, and you had to make a rush to get in, where you did, without a ducking from the starboard waste-water pipe through the ship's side, which was very leaky, so that there generally was a torrent of water falling down from it. But once in a while a bag of cotton wipings for a bed and my jacket rolled up for a pillow, I could generally calculate on a comfortable snooze, without disturbance from the weeels or anything else I am obliged to be so particular in my description, or you would never understand what I have to relate In this favorite spot of mine, then, you will understand that I lay down, and in a very few minutes was fast asleep

"I had not slept very long, when I awoke with a start, and with an uneasy unconsciousness that there was something unusual in the working of the engine I leant on my elbow and listened. They were going much more slowly than usual, and there was a peculiar jerking style about their motion which seemed as if they were working expansively with high steam, and the well known rushing sound in the steam pipes, like the wind through a doorway when the door is ajar, showed me in a moment that they were closely 'throttled'—that is, that the valves in the pipes leading to the cylinders were partially closed, so as to check the flow of steam from the boilers to the engines I saw, too, that there was a very bright glow from the furnaces, and that the fires were more than usually intense. I fancied, also, from the absence of the usual currents of air except through the windsail and from the forehold, and the appearance of the lights and shadows, that the hatches over the crank gratings, and the companionway leading to the deck, were closed—a thing very unusual, except in bad weather

"I was about to creep out of my lair to see what was the meaning of all this, when I heard persons in earnest conversation in the passage between the engines, and almost close to where I was By a slight movement I was able also to see them One was our chief engineer, who had never before been known in the engine room at this hour of the night, he had his hands on the injection handles, and was regulating the supply of water to the diminished quantity of steam passing through the engines The other, with his back turned toward me, was a person whom I did not know at all He appeared a slight, gracefully formed young man, of middle height, dressed in sailors' clothes of coarse texture and with the voice of a youth rather than of a man I should have gone out at once to see what was doing, but the first words I distinguished arrested my attention in a moment It was the youth who said

'How long before we shall leave the ship?'

'Not long now,' replied the chief 'but we have nothing more to do except to start when it is time'

'Are you sure the third engineer is all right?'

'Yes He sleeps in one of the wheel houses, and I have turned the key upon him Dick is at the wheel, the rest of the watch on deck, and these smutty fellows are disposed of We have lowered the boat all safe and all is ready for a start

'Then why not go now?'

'No, we might still be discovered in time to spoil all Let us wait till the last moment and we shall be sure that we have got rid of the infernal ship and all that could ever give us trouble But, by—' he said, with a glance toward the gauges, 'there isn't much time to spare, either The steam mounts quicker than I thought, it is at twenty five already, and the water is all out of the gauges Just step on deck, and tell Dick we shall be off at once'

'The youth turned and ascended quickly to the deck, and the chief went to the stoke hole, opened the furnace doors, looked at the fires, and threw in some coals and tallow

I should make a bad hand at describing my feelings and all that sort of thing but I think you may imagine that the unaccountable appearance of a stranger in the ship—the intelligence that the watch both on deck and in the engine room were disposed of—the knowledge that the steam was at twenty five pounds to the inch our usual working pressure being fifteen and rapidly rising, with the safety valves of course fastened down—every heavily loaded—the engines throttled of half their steam the feed in the boilers very low and the furnaces fed with coal and tallow it was altogether enough to make one feel queer The boilers were new and strong, but for that very reason when they did give way the destruction would be the greater and I expected soon a terrific explosion which probably might send the ship to the bottom I understood at once—indeed, there was no room for doubt after what I had seen and heard—that the villains had by some means got hold of the gold on board, that they had either drugged or overpowered the watch and that it was their intention to blow up the ship and escape in the confusion or to get away a little beforehand, and trust to the explosion, which must inevitably follow to remove all proof of their crime and all dread of capture I saw what it was but I confess to you sir at the risk of being thought a coward, that I stood at first unable to think or act to any useful purpose Had I been prompt and decided now was my time to have acted while the stranger was on deck but I own that I stood rooted to the spot, with shaky knees with quivering lips and with the cold, clammy perspiration standing on my forehead I have often been in peril but I never felt so unmanned before or since, as I did then, and I verily believe that, had I been left alone, I should have allowed the ship and the gold and my own life and the lives of all on board to take their chance rather than venture out to face those desperadoes

"I had not the choice The chief, after looking at the fire and examining the guages, crossed the stoke hole to the other passage under the starboard platform, with the view probably of getting at some of the grease and tallow that was stowed away close by where I had made my couch I saw that I must now be discovered, but with the prospect of a struggle with one man singly, my courage revived, my limbs became steady, and the coward feeling left my heart He groped his way slowly up the passage, and then made the rush which I have described as necessary to avoid the water from the waste pipe This rush brought him close to me before he stopped, and we stood face to face My eyes were accustomed to the dim light of the place, while his were yet dazzled by the bright light of the fires, so that I could distinguish his features, while he was yet uncertain whether there was any one there but himself I ought to have seized the opportunity, and attacked him at once, but I foolishly let the moment pass, and instead of acting promptly, I sang out, 'Who is there?' In a moment his eyes lit up with a look of fierce intelligence, and with a suppressed exclamation he sprang upon me The suddenness of the attack made me start back, and my foot being tripped up by the bag of cotton I used for a bed, we fell heavily to the deck together, I being undermost His left hand was on my throat, and clutching my hair with his right, he, with a quick lift and jerk moved my head to one side toward the engine I did not resist the movement much, for I had not thought exactly where I was lying, but oh! I think what was my horror at the next instant to see directly over the end of the side lever descending, and not more than three feet above my head! By a violent effort I got out of the way just in time, but even then the cutter at the end of the lever grazed my forehead in its descent

"The horror of my position seemed to give me for the moment preternatural strength and I succeeded in rolling my antagonist over till I became uppermost, and then I struck him with my clenched fist two or three heavy blows on the face with such effect that his hold of me relaxed, and I thought that I had stunned him In a moment I gained my feet and fled, but I had been mistaken in fancying I had quieted my antagonist, he was nearly as quick as I was and pursued me closely I rushed through the passage by the side of the ship, across the stoke hole, through the passage between the engines, and thence to the platform and up the ladder leading to the deck The chief was close behind me, so that I dared not lose time by turning my head, and I remember how I heard his feet slip as he crossed the iron floor of the stoke hole directly after me I tried to fling open the door of the companion, and gain the deck I thought that my escape was certain But, oh! sir, I had no sooner touched the door than I found that it was closed, fastened on the outside I looked down The chief was standing on the platform at the foot of the ladder, he held a revolving pistol in his hand, and was then in the act of cocking it! There was no time for hesitation, and I flung myself right off the ladder upon him He fired, but without having time to take aim, and I was not hit With the force of my fall, we both rolled off the platform into the passage between the engines, the pistol being at the same time dashed from his hand How we both escaped being crushed by the machinery I scarcely know, but so it was, and directly we were both on our feet again, and struggling through the passage on to the slippery stoke hole floor

"Here, still grasping each other's throats, we paused to take breath, and I saw then that Macpherson and the stokers, and trimmers of the watch were lying either dead or dead drunk about the side platforms and stoke-hole I shouted as well as I could, but without avail, and then a thought flashed across me—the steam whistle! There was a handle from which it could be sounded in the engine-room If I could but reach that I must alarm all the ship, and we might yet be saved But at that moment the companion was opened and the youth, the chief's accomplice, descended He came down the ladder hastily, but he had no sooner turned and seen what was going on than he paused, as if frightened and irresolute how to act The chief saw him as soon as I did, and sung out to him 'The pistol! the pistol! there, between the engines!'

"The youth picked up the pistol, and coming forward presented it at me, but I could see, even in that moment, that he had omitted to cock it He pulled at the trigger but of course without avail 'Cock it, d—n you, cock it!' he cried out, and then I heard the click as the hammer was drawn back and the chamber revolved It was now or never for me I am a Cornishman, sir, and like most from that country, a little bit of a wrestler I had regained my strength a little, and skill took the place of what was wanting It was my only chance So, quick as lightning, I gave the chief the 'toe,' as we call it in our country, and turned him over like a top toward the side on which the youth was standing He fired at the same instant, but the sudden turn I gave my antagonist changed our positions and the bullet, after inflicting a flesh wound in my arm, entered his body instead of mine The youth gazed for a moment with a look of horror, and then, with a scream, threw himself on the body At that same instant I saw who it was It was no youth, but a woman, and our Captain's new wife But I did not wait to speculate on this, for I saw that the fires must be drawn at once, and I had no strength left I sprang to the handle and sounded the whistle There was the well known shrill shriek which could not fail to be heard throughout the ship, and I fell down fainting on the stoke hole floor.

"I remember little more that passed until I found myself in the hospital at Panama The events of that night—my wound, and the want of medical attendance, for we carried no surgeon—had brought on an attack of fever, and I had been dangerously ill I had been delirious, and when I did regain my consciousness the events which had really happened were so mingled in my brain with extravagant fancies of my delirium that I found it difficult to distinguish the one from the other I soon discovered, however that people had been told I had been guilty of gross insubordination toward the chief engineer, and that he had been so maddened by passion as to fire his revolver at me, and that I having gained possession of the revolver in the struggle which ensued had shot him to save my own life Of course I denied this, but my ideas and no doubt my talk, were still so incoherent that but little notice was taken of what I said Soon the Captain of the steamer came to my bedside and begged and entreated me in the most earnest, the most piteous manner, to allow this version of the story to be believed He said he had been bewitched by the charms and arts of that woman and believing that none of the crew knew that he was already married he had agreed to give her a passage and had taken her on board as his wife She had begged of him, by pretending a playful womanish curiosity a knowledge of where the gold on board was stowed, and how it could be got at and this vile woman, with her accomplice (the villain whom he had foolishly engaged at her recommendation as chief engineer) and another man had between them conceived and attempted to carry out that atrocious project in which they had been nearly successful The engineer's hurt had not been serious, and the Captain said that he had connived at his escape with his accomplices as soon as the ship got into port The woman, indeed had not been seen in her disguise by any one but himself for he had been first in the engine room when the whistle sounded the alarm and had managed somehow to get her out of the way unseen 'It would be useless now' he said 'to attempt to capture them and he implored me not to contradict the account he had caused to be circulated and so cause his ruin, which would be sure to follow should the owners learn the real truth of the story He made the most solemn vows of repentance and amendment, and I believe he was truly sorry for his fault, as well as its consequences but I was deaf to all until he spoke of his sweet wife and his dear little girl whom I had seen as I have said at New York Well sir at last I yielded and agreed to confirm the account he had given You may be sure that the crew and especially Macpherson and the rest of the watch in the engine room and on deck—who had been drugged by some liquor which the chief had given them—were not altogether imposed upon and a hundred different versions of the story were living about it But no one ever knew the rights of the affair We were not in England you know sir and it was a lawless time and a lawless part of the world I returned to Europe as soon as I was recovered and from that time to this I have never told any body but you how it all happened

WASHINGTON September 15 1866

1 All applications shall be filed within the period of six months from the 1st day of October, 1866, and before any payments are made shall be classified by regiments battalions or other separate organizations, and no application filed after that period shall be settled until after the former shall have been paid

2 No application shall be entertained unless accompanied by the original discharge of the soldier and the affidavit required by the fourteenth section of the Act, and the further affidavit that he has not received, nor is he entitled to receive from the United States, under any laws or regulations prior to the Act of July 28, 1866 more than $100 bounty for any and all military service rendered by him during the late rebellion over and above the amount therein claimed

3 All applications for the additional bounty authorized by this Act from surviving soldiers shall be in the form hereinafter prescribed, and the evidence of identity shall be the same as is now required and applications from the heirs of deceased soldiers shall be in the form now required by the Treasury Department

4 As soon as the examination of the claims of any regiment or other independent organization shall have been properly acted upon the Paymaster General shall take the necessary steps for their prompt payment

5 A register shall be kept in the Paymaster General's office, and also in the office of the Second Auditor of all claims presented under the law, in which the claimants will be classified by regiments, etc If the claims be allowed, the amount of bounty paid to each will be noted, and if rejected the cause of rejection will be distinctly stated

6 In the applications for bounty, as required by the third of these rules the affidavit shall state each and every period of service rendered by the claimant and also that he never served otherwise than as herein stated

7 Organizations irregularly in the service of the United States, or called out for special purposes as State Militia, Home Guards etc and not included in the general bounty laws are not included within the meaning of the Act

8 Soldiers enlisted for three years or during the war who were discharged by reason of the termination of the war shall be considered as having served out the period of their enlistment, and are entitled to bounty under this Act

9 The minority of heirs claimants for bounty under this Act must be proven to have existed at the date of its passage Parents shall receive jointly the bounty to which they may be entitled as heirs unless the father has abandoned the support of his family, in which case it shall be paid to the mother Non residence in the United States shall not be a bar to the claim of heirs, who would otherwise legally inherit

The provisions of the Act exclude from its benefits the following classes

1 Those who after serving the full period of their enlistment were dishonorably discharged at its expiration

2 Those discharged during enlistment by way of favor or punishment

3 Those discharged on account of disability contracted in the service but not occasioned by wounds received in the line of duty, who shall not have previously served two or three years respectively at the time of discharge

4 Those discharged on account of disability existing at the time of their enlistment

5 The heirs of those who have died since their discharge of wounds or disease not contracted in the service and in the line of duty

6 The surviving soldiers and heirs of deceased soldiers who under previous laws have received or are entitled to receive a bounty of more than $100 from the United States

7 The surviving soldiers as well as the heirs of deceased soldiers when such soldiers have bartered, sold assigned loaned transferred exchanged or given away their final discharge papers or any interest in the bounty provided by this or any other Act of Congress

8 The Act of the 28th of July 1866 creates no right of inheritance beyond those vested by the law under which these bounties are received the heirs entitled to receive the original bounty and brothers and sisters of heirs that were entitled to receive the original bounty from any claim for the additional bounty provided by this Act

Respectfully referred to the Attorney General for his opinion on the point whether these rules and regulations as within amended are in conformity with law
EDWIN M STANTON
September 14 1866 Secretary of War

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr Gibbon's Dispensary,

616 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases such as Gonorrhea Gleet Stricture Syphilis in all its forms Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs successfully treated

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system. Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene Let parents, guardians friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of these horrible life-destroying maladies see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late Send them immediately to Doctor Gibbon, a physician who has made private disease his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate cases without mercury or any injurious drugs It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of those charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse This solitary vice or depraved sexual indulgence, is practised by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent producing, with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz Sallow countenance, dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers a dislike to form new acquaintances a disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes; pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, feted breath coughs, consumption night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained should apply immediately either in person or by letter and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure Dr G will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible and will give to each patient a written instrument binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure or make no charge

Persons at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by addressing a letter to Doctor Gibbon, stating case, symptoms length of time the disease has continued and have medicines promptly forwarded free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country with full and plain directions for use, for Ten Dollars, sent in registered letter or through Wells, Fargo & Co
